

Why Are Bayern Munich one of the most enviable clubs in Germany?

Flag of Bayern Munich. Credit: Getty Images

Bayern Munich has just won their 8th Bundesliga title, cementing their local reign, but with 5 European titles under their belt, they are clearly continuing to claim international fame. This is the 30th occasion the club has won the Bundesliga league title in their history, the most by any German team.

Germany's dominant club has undergone a transformation period, from changing managers in November to Bayern's president Uli Hoeneß stepping down after 49 years of being involved with the club.

Simone Margett

SHARE

Modified 05 August 2020, 17:30 GMT

Bayern have created many legendary players over the years in the forms of Thomas Müller, Bastian Schweinsteiger, Philipp Lahm and David Alaba, each player having played important parts in the club's history. From an outsider's perspective, one could say other clubs are envious of their leadership and success as former players maintain an important role in the running of the Bavarian club.

Over the years they have been accused of weakening the league as many of their successful players such as Robert Lewandowski, Niklas Sule, Manuel Neuer and Leon Goretzka came from rival clubs. Bayern Munich is a club that people love to hate, but also one to admire. What makes the team a cut above others is their mentality and objective, namely, to win, no matter what.

Chelsea vs Bayern Munich at Stamford Bridge in London on February 25, 2020.
(Photo by Glyn KIRK / AFP)

According to a source from TransferMarkt, Borussia Dortmund have bought more players from rivals than any club in Bundesliga despite spending money on rival players, they have not been able to meet the success like Bayern which could be down to management or the lack of drive. Many ex-rival team players such as Gnabry and Goretzka have proven even more successful after the switch to Bayern.

As another transfer window comes around, Bayern will be looking to strengthen their squad, securing the signature of German talent Leroy Sané. Having already secured young Schalke goalkeeper Alexander Nübel.

As of July 2nd, 2020, Leroy Sané has signed a 5-year contract with FC Bayern München as confirmed by Bayern officials.

With the way they are currently playing under former assistant manager Hansi Flick, there is no doubt that with the young talent they have in their ranks and with reinforcements that they surely will continue their winning ways in Germany and Europe for a long time to come.